Man Bound with Wire Escapes from Railroad Track.

DAUGHTER'S SUITOR HELD

Boboken Man Says Midnight Attack Followed His Refusal to Permit Girl to Wed.

Accused of attempting to kill the father of the girl whom he wished to make his wife, John Carrell, of No. 26 Grand street, Hoboken, was committed to the Hudson County Jail without bail yesterday to await the action of the grand jury.

The girl is Mary Miralagala, daughter of Salvatore Miralagala, a contractor, of 24 Monroe street. Miralagala did not approve of Carrell, and told his daughter not to have anything to do with him. Tuesday at midnight, the contractor was crossing the lots at 5th street when he was pounced upon by the young man. They grabbed his hands and fastened them securely with wire.

At this point, it is alleged, Carrell, who wore a mask and was smiling, stepped from behind a pile of lumber, begged the contractor and asked him to consent to the marriage. Receiving a negative reply, Carrell, it is alleged, ordered the contractor to be killed.

My coat was then taken and placed over my head," said the contractor on the stand. "I was forced to kneel down and the next instant I was placed across the Erie railroad tracks. I tried to cry out, but the coat in my mouth prevented any sound from escaping.

"But their plans had a mishap. While I was being held down they were scared at the approach of two men. Instead of being fastened to the tracks, I was picked up and hurried into the swamp. I went almost up to my neck. How long I lay there I don't know. After a while I regained my senses and made my way to the saloon at No. 500 Monroe street, where Frank Sutaro cut the wires and released me."

Miralagala failed to recognize live other young men who had been arrested and they were discharged.

CARD FRAY ON OLYMPIC

American Player Not Only Loses but Has Face Slapped.

The loss of a propeller blade when three days out from Queensborough and a rumper for the outcome of a poker game broke the monotony of an ocean trip for the passengers of the Olympic, which arrived yesterday, twenty-four hours behind schedule.

Notice that card sharps were aboard the steamer were posted conspicuously about the Olympic cabin after her departure, but in spite of the warnings a number of games were started. H. C. Miller, an American who had lived in England two years, was a heavy loser, and he had to have the methods of L. T. Curtis, an Oregon lumber dealer, who had won the men out outside the smoking room Tuesday afternoon and Adler was greeted with a slap in the face. Friends of both men intervened, although the smoking room was carefully watched the remaining few days of the trip.

On the first day out the Olympic lost a blade from a starboard propeller, which was the cause of the delay. Good weather was the rule all the way over.

On the big steamer were 452 third cabin passengers, 267 in the second cabin and 26 in the first. Among the latter were Max Klaw, the theatrical manager; P. A. S. Franklin, vice-president of the International Mercantile Marine, and K. A. Wadala, of Bombay, the famous automobile importer of India. Patrick McDonald, the patrolman, who participated in the shot putting events at the Olympic games, was also on board.

WILEY HELD IN $7,000 BAIL

Charged with Bringing English Millworkers Into This Country.

Boston, Aug. 15.—Charged with conspiring to bring English mill operatives into this country in violation of the contract labor law, Francis Vernon Willey and Arthur T. Saville, of Bradford, England, were before today's court. Willey and Saville were examined and were held in $7,000 bonds each for the September term of the United States grand jury. Both furnished bail.

Willey is the treasurer of the Barre Wool Combing Company, of Barre, Mass., and it is alleged by the federal authorities that aliens were brought into this country to work in the Barre mills. Willey is the son of Francis Willey, formerly Lord Mayor of Bradford, and one of the wealthiest manufacturers in England. Saville is an employee of the firm of Francis Willey & Co., of Bradford and Boston.

Twenty-three English millworkers, who it is alleged, were induced to come to this country by Willey and Saville, have been detained in this city by the immigration authorities, since July 1.

BELMONT TO BE EXAMINED

Court Denies Motion to Vacate Order in Action for Libel.

Justice Blatchford yesterday denied the motion of the officers of the American Kennel Club, including August Belmont, president, to vacate an order for their examination before trial in the suit brought by Miss Rosalie Stewart for $25,000 damages for alleged libel. Miss Stewart seeks the damages for statements printed about her in the organ of the kennel club. She was an officer of the Toy Spaniel Club.

Justice Blatchford said in his decision denying the motion of Mr. Belmont and the other defendants that the examination was sought in good faith and while the defendants might assert privilege on some of the matters involved, there was no basis to which no privilege would attach.

DEAD-LINE DETECTIVE DIES

George Doran Had Been in Wall Street Twenty-five Years.

George Doran, for twenty-five years in the Wall street branch of the detective bureau, died suddenly Thursday night, when visiting friends at No. 25 Bay 25th street, Bath Beach.

Mr. Doran was born in this city in 1861, and before his appointment on the police force in 1886, he was a jeweler. After his appointment he was assigned to a detective bureau, and was soon made a detective in good standing. Of the good work he did in keeping the crooks below the "dead line," Mr. Doran was a bachelor, and lived with his mother at No. 177 Bay 25th street, Bath Beach.

PREFERS DOG TO ENGLAND

Miss Chamberlain Goes Elsewhere and Keeps Pet.

[By Telegraph to The Tribune.] Boston, Aug. 15.—Just because they wouldn't let her land her dog, Fida, in England, Miss Cora Chamberlain, of Brookline, became so indignant that she cancelled her sailing on the Cyprian last Tuesday and left Boston to-day on the Canopic for Mediterranean ports.

Miss Chamberlain is a writer who spends much of her time travelling. During her ramblings about the world Fida is her constant companion, and once, while in the Balkans, she said, Fida saved her from being carried away by bandits.

"What?" she exclaimed today. "Not let me take my little Fida into England? Well, I wouldn't go to England, anyway, and that is why I am sailing to-day on the Canopic. If I can't take Fida, then I don't go. If he isn't good enough for them over there, then I'm not."

The English law on the importation of dogs is very strict. Every dog must remain in quarantine for several months before it is allowed to land on English soil, and it was because of these restrictions Miss Chamberlain could not carry her pet with her to that country.

NEW MOVE IN BRANDT CASE

Prisoner Must Be Produced in Plattsburg Court To-day.

Danvers, N. Y., Aug. 15.—Another effort is to be made to secure the release of Folke E. Brandt, former valet of Mortimer L. Schiff, of New York, who is serving a thirty-year term in Clinton prison, for burglary committed in the Schiff home.

Warden Kaiser, of Clinton prison, was served with a writ of habeas corpus to-day directing him to produce Brandt before Supreme Court Justice Kellogg, at Plattsburg, to-morrow afternoon at 2 o'clock. The writ was issued by Justice Kellogg on application of Mirabeau L. Towne, of New York, Brandt's attorney. Warden Kaiser said he would have Brandt in court at the appointed time.

Brandt appeared to Governor Dix last November to commute his sentence, but the Governor declined to do so. Brandt was released for a time last winter on habeas corpus proceedings, but was returned to Clinton prison from New York early in June. The Court of Appeals later affirmed the decision of the Appellate Division, which ordered his return to prison.

RESCUED BY 300-POUNDER

Ex-Fire Chief Pulls Woman from Water Just in Time.

[By Telegraph to The Tribune.] Atlantic Highlands, N. J., Aug. 15.—Miss Mary Mitchell, of New York City, guest at the Sea View Hotel here, was rescued from drowning this afternoon by ex-Fire Chief Louis H. Foster after she had sank the third time. She was unconscious when brought ashore. Mrs. A. C. Green, a former trained nurse, was on the beach and worked over the victim for more than an hour before signs of life appeared.

Miss Mitchell was seen sitting on the edge of a bulkhead extending into the bay. Suddenly she fell into the water and made no apparent effort to save herself. Several hundred bathers were on the spot in a few moments, but none jumped into the water to save the woman's life.

Foster, fully dressed, who weighs nearly 300 pounds, rushed out of the pavilion and dived into the water without removing even his shoes. He brought the woman ashore with great difficulty.

Miss Mitchell said she was sitting on the bulkhead for a few minutes, when she became dizzy and fell into the water. After that she knew nothing until revived on the beach. She said she thought she was sunstruck.

YOUNG MOTHER A FIREBUG

With Baby on Arm, Mother Confesses to Arson.

Mrs. Anna Gritz appeared with her baby on her arm before Judge Dike, in the Kings County Court yesterday, and pleaded guilty to an indictment charging her with arson. She will be sentenced next Tuesday.

The woman set fire to her home, No. 174 Park Place, July 26. The firemen deemed the fire suspicious, and Fire Marshal Brophy gathered enough evidence to place the responsibility upon the young mother.

When first brought into court yesterday she declared she was not guilty, but after Judge Dike assured her she would be treated with clemency should she confess she admitted the truth.

HONEY CROP TO BE SHORT

Cold Winter Killed Millions of Best Illinois Bees.

[By Telegraph to The Tribune.] Bloomington, Ill., Aug. 15.—The honey crop in Illinois, one of the principal states of supply, will be the shortest in the history of the industry this year. Millions of the best bees were killed by the severe cold of last winter.

The aparies in which the bees were warmly housed, and in which the mortality was small, report large crops of honey, but they are so few in number that a heavy shortage is inevitable.

TRAPPED AS "FIREBUGS"

Woman Detective Helps Catch Four Men in Brooklyn.

TORCH APPLIED TO STABLE

Fire Marshal Brophy and Squad Save Several Horses Covered with Gasoline.

Through clever detective work on the part of Thomas Brophy, fire marshal of Brooklyn, and his assistants, one of whom is a woman, four alleged incendiaries walked into a trap set for them early yesterday morning in Williamsburg, and later in the day they were arraigned in the Manhattan avenue court on charges of arson and held for an examination on Saturday. The prisoners were Morris Greenberg, alias "Greene the Torch," of No. 345 Blake avenue, East New York; his son David, twenty-one years old; Hyman Wasserman, of No. 404 Blake avenue, and Louis Evans, of No. 215 Varet street.

Shadowed by Miss Laura Grant, who is the only woman detective on the fire marshal's staff, the four alleged "firebugs" left Greenberg's home early yesterday morning. The men boarded a Ham-brook avenue car, as did Miss Grant, while Brophy and five of his men followed the car in an automobile. The four men got out of the car at Johnson avenue, in Williamsburg, and Miss Grant followed them to Morgan avenue, where she saw them enter a stable. Brophy, in his automobile, was cautiously approaching in Johnson avenue, two blocks away. Miss Grant gave him the signal to stop, and presently joined him.

Brophy then gave instructions to his assistants and they surrounded the stable. The fire marshal waited for several minutes and then saw a tongue of flame shoot from behind one of the stable's windows. Whipping out a revolver, Brophy fired three shots, the signal for his men to be on the lookout for the escaping "firebugs." The four men were arrested as they ran to safety from the stable door.

Brophy rushed into the place, which had been saturated with gasoline. Six horses in the stalls had also been sprinkled with the liquid and one of them was already burning. Before the fire could gain any headway it was put out by extinguishers which had been borrowed at the house of Engine Company No. 127, around the corner in Morgan avenue. All the horses were taken out of the stable. They looked to be poorly fed animals, and it was said by Brophy that the horses found in the stable had been substituted for six valuable animals, which were taken out of the place before the torch was applied. The fire would have destroyed the evidence, the fire marshal alleged.

When the prisoners were searched in the Stagg street police station Evans was found to have on his person. It is alleged, enough arsenic pills to kill forty horses. Brophy charged the four prisoners with arson, and it is alleged that Evans made a confession in which he stated that he hired the Greenbergs and Wasserman to burn the stable in order to obtain $2,000 fire insurance.

SAY CHILDREN USE DRUG

Police Arrest Two Men for Having Pellets in Their Possession.

Captain Isaac Frank of the Brownsville station, Brooklyn, and Detectives Thomas Blittman, of No. 124 St. John's Place, and William Heath, of No. 125 Deatur street, on the charge of having a drug in their possession. Receipts for containing pellets of the drug were concealed in their trousers' legs, the police alleged.

The consumption of the dangerous drug has assumed an alarming stage among the youths of East New York. Even young girls who frequent dance halls are consumers of the drug. Children of school age may also purchase the drug at a penny a pellet, the police say, from friends who peddle it.

GIRL WEIGHING 630 TO WED

Husband-To-Be of "Fat Lady" Tips Scales at 130.

Blushing cooly over six inches or so of cheek Miss Alpine Blitch, the 630-pound "fat lady" of the Dreamland circus side-show, told the Coney Island reporters that she was going to get married to-day. The bridegroom, she announced last night, would be Louis H. Aiken, of Springfield, Mass. He weighs only 130 pounds less than his lady love.

He met her while she was with a show in Connecticut last year, and proposed right away, but Miss Blitch had the nerve and good-sense to stand him off. But he trailed her until she consented, and every night now after she climbs laboriously down from the platform he meets her and escorts her to her boarding house.

Miss Blitch says she and Mr. Aiken will go to the marriage license bureau in Borough Hall to-day, and then seek the nearest alderman. None of that side-show marriage stuff for her! No, sir! She's a Florida girl, twenty years old. He's a typesetter, thirty-five years old.

ROBIN ON ASSETS HUNT

Secures Order to Have Frederick K. Morris Examined.

Joseph G. Robin, the financier, now in the Tombs, wants to find out about some assets of the Bankers' Realty and Security Company, formerly at 42nd street and Broadway, which have not come into the possession of the trustee in bankruptcy. Robin says he believes Frederick K. Morris, secretary of the company, knows of their whereabouts. He also says he believes certain books have not come into the possession of the trustee.

Robin, who sets forth that he is a creditor of the company for about $20,000, applied to Judge Holt, of the federal court, yesterday for the examination of Morris, and the court granted the order, directing Morris to appear before Commissioner Alexander Gilchrist, Jr.

JUSTIFIES P. T. BARNUM

Southern Planter Loses Roll Matching Coins.

GAME WITHOUT VARIATIONS

One Arrest Is Made as Result of Trusting Visitor's Complaint.

Although much has been written about the fake farmer with the regulation chin whiskers and horn-bowling glasses, who is always ready to follow unwary strangers to their bank rolls, and although his methods have been thoroughly disclosed, it seems that the old game is still profitable for the bunco men who ply their trade on Broadway. Benjamin S. Bonknight, a young cotton planter, from Johnston, S. C., whose father is the president of the Edgely Bank, is the latest victim.

Bonknight appeared in the Yorkville court yesterday as a complainant against Arthur Burton, twenty-six years old, of No. 169 West 110th street, who says he is a bookkeeper, charging him with assisting a bunco man to separate him from his roll, containing $45 in cash and three checks for $50 each, drawn on his father's bank in Edgely.

Having read of the many interesting sights to be seen and the more interesting things to do in New York, the young fellow decided that he would go for himself. Last Thursday he arrived on one of the Clyde liners, with the intention of staying a few days and then visiting relatives in Sheffield, Mass.

In the morning as he was walking along Broadway looking into the shop windows he noticed a man doing the same thing.

"I'm a stranger here," said the man, according to Bonknight. "Great old town, isn't it? It sort of hits you between the eyes it's so well, but I wish I had some one to go around with."

Bonknight struck up an acquaintance with the stranger and they visited several of the city's points of interest together. As they were walking along Broadway the stranger asked a verdant looking man with chin whiskers whom he recognized as a friend from his home town. This stranger joined the party, and they found that "SI," as his friend called him, had just drawn a lot of money from his great aunt's estate, and was going to show Broadway.

They went to a saloon, where several cocktails were disposed of, and then "SI" suggested that they toss pennies. The game soon ran from pennies to dollars and the final bet was $100. Bonknight lost and it left him stranded. "SI" said that it was all a joke, and that he would return the money, but while they were having a drink in a roof garden later "SI" and his companion excused themselves from the table for a minute. They did not return.

When the planter realized that he had been in an easy mark he went to the Tenderloin station and entered a complaint. He then telegraphed to Edgely to stop payment on the checks.

Detective Maroon arrested Burton on Wednesday night in front of the Hotel Metropole and locked him up. Yesterday Bonknight viewed him out from a crowd of men in the courtroom, and Magistrate O'Connor held him in $2,000 bail for trial.

FOUR UNHURT IN CRASH

Women and Chauffeur Have Narrow Escape Between Cars.

Three women and the chauffeur, who was driving them in a big touring car, had a narrow escape from death yesterday afternoon when the automobile was crushed between two trolley cars at Fulton street and New York avenue, Jamaica. The machine was owned by John McAuley, a real estate broker, of No. 352 Fulton street, Jamaica. In the car were his wife, Mary L. McAuley, Mrs. Elizabeth Babcock, sixty years old, of No. 76 Park Place, Brooklyn, and the latter's daughter, Margaret. The chauffeur was Edward Mayer, of No. 288 Washington street, Jamaica.

Mrs. Babcock and her daughter had been to Jamaica to see some property for which they were negotiating with Mr. McAuley. They were on their way back to his office. Mayer started to turn into Fulton street, steering to pass a trolley car and not noticing another bearing down on the opposite direction. The automobile was caught between the two cars and almost every part of it was smashed, except the seats, Mayer and the three women being not so much as scratched. They could not be extricated, however, until the trolley passengers assisted them to climb over the guard rails into the open car.

Mayer was arrested for driving without a license.

HELD ONLY AS "JOY RIDER"

Christmas's Demeanor Toward Edna Gray Not Put Forward.

John Christmas, Jr., of No. 81 Jefferson avenue, Brooklyn, was arrested at the Belmont Inn, Jamaica, yesterday on the charge of taking an automobile without permission. The complainant against him was Solomon Segal, of No. 1108 Bedford avenue, Brooklyn. He was held in the Gates avenue police court in $250 bail for a hearing on Monday.

Christmas had been charged with taking the car of Edna Gray, of No. 714 Greene avenue, after a joy ride in the same automobile, but a clear statement as to what he did has been made by the young woman, and no steps have been taken by her family to have any charges brought against him.

The prisoner is married and has a child. His wife and aunt were in court yesterday, but would make no statement. Christmas set out for a ride with Miss Gray on August 6.

WOMAN KILLS WOMAN

Victim Widely Known in South—Jealousy Alleged Motive.

Nashville, Tenn., Aug. 15.—Mrs. Alva Cave, daughter-in-law of the Rev. R. Lin Cave, chaplain general of the United Confederate Veterans, was murdered last night, and Mrs. J. G. Jones, twenty-four years old, is in jail, accused of the killing. The victim was a widow, thirty years old, and well known in Southern circles.

Mrs. Jones had filed a bill for divorce, and was living apart from her husband. Recently, however, the bill had been withdrawn.

The killing occurred in Mrs. Cave's home. Mrs. Jones, according to the police, charged, gained admittance to Mrs. Cave's room and began shooting. Defenseless, Mrs. Cave was mortally wounded and died in a few minutes. Jealousy, the police say, caused the crime.

STAGE FOR MRS. BLATCH

May Occupy Auto in Suffrage Act at Hammerstein's.

STREET MEETING SCENE

Various Organizations Trying to Get Spectacular Things for Three Days' Show.

Fancy Mrs. Harriot Stanton Blatch, desiring upon the stage of Oscar Hammerstein's Victoria Theatre in a huge yellow automobile, with Miss Annie Tinker at the wheel, and a bodyguard of suffragettes waving votes-for-women flags! That is what is going to happen the night of Thursday, September 12. Hammerstein never devised anything more spectacular, and yet this beautiful act is being handed over to him for nothing, and with a "Thank you, sir" in the bargain.

The seven suffrage organizations invited to appear in rotation at the Victoria Theatre, beginning September 9, are trying hard to devise something different, each from the others. The Women's Political Union decided that a street meeting, with an automobile in the center, would be most characteristic of their methods. Mrs. Charles Edward Knobloch, who led the cavalcade in the May 4 parade, when Miss Tinker, who was to have led it, got appendicitis and couldn't go, worked the act up and is staging it. The only thing that is lacking is Hammerstein's consent. He hadn't been asked yesterday.

Will he consent, or will he demur that a big automobile loaded with sizable suffragettes is too heavy for his stage? Mrs. Knobloch isn't much worried, anyhow, and she is going ahead with the preparations.

Miss Elizabeth Ellsworth Cook will be the speaker in the afternoon stunt of the union, with Mrs. Blatch in the evening. There will be singing also, a verse of "America," by Miss Almie Hutchinson, the girl who was dismissed by the Rev. Matthew Taylor, of the Church of the Blessed Sacrament, from the teaching staff of his parochial school a few months ago, and who declared that Father Taylor did it because she marched in the suffrage parade. Miss Hutchinson doesn't feel badly now about her dismissal, because she is engaged to sing in opera this coming season.

The Women's Political Union is having a strenuous campaign in Rockland County this week, under Miss Caroline Lexow. At Stony Point, where they spoke yesterday, even the dogs are barking on the cause. Two of them, a bull pup and an Alsatian terrier, got up a perfectly good fight at the hour and spot chosen by the union, a fight that brought all the dogs of the whole town on the run. And then, of course, they stayed to listen to the suffragettes—at least, the people did.

WOMAN DIES AT ALTAR

Passes Away While at Prayer in Philadelphia Church.

[By Telegraph to The Tribune.] Philadelphia, Aug. 15.—Mrs. Johanna Yeager, eighty-six years old, died while kneeling in prayer at early mass this morning, in the Church of St. Francis of Assisi. She passed away so peacefully that none of those around her suspected what had happened until she failed to rise at the end of the service.

As the congregation was leaving some one touched her on the shoulder, and then it was found she was dead. A doctor was hurriedly called, but it was too late.

Mrs. Yeager had prepared breakfast for her son Frederick in her home, at No. 41 Mansfield street, and had gone to church before he awoke. She had planned to visit to-day another son, who is an inmate of the state insane asylum in Norristown. She had been in poor health for some time, and recently fainted while at mass in the church in which she died. It is believed grief for the insanity of her son hastened the aged woman's death.

TAKES YOUNG BRIDE AT 61

Retired Philadelphia Business Man Weds in Long Island City.

The marriage of Frederick Hornby, of No. 515 Regent street, Philadelphia, and Emily Fleming, of the same address, was recorded yesterday in Long Island City. On Wednesday the couple applied at the bureau for a marriage license. Hornby gave his age as sixty-one years and Miss Fleming said she was twenty-nine years old and a native of Montreal. Hornby said he was retired from business, and that he had been married once before.

The pair was accompanied by a New York lawyer. After getting the license they went to the home of the Rev. Alexander Shaw, pastor of the First Reformed Church, of Long Island City, by whom they were married.

UNGRATEFUL FOR MERCY

Woman Saved by Taft from Hanging Wants "Rope or Free Air."

[From The Tribune Bureau.] Washington, Aug. 15.—The President received a letter to-day from the Rev. Simon W. P. Drew, spiritual adviser of Mattie Lomax, the negro woman whom President Taft saved from death by hanging by commuting her sentence to life imprisonment. It reads:

By your godly and statesmanlike act in commuting to life imprisonment the sentence of Mattie Lomax, you have buried your memory afresh into the hearts of our race throughout the entire country, as well as the best white citizens of the District of Columbia and elsewhere.

I beg to extend to you my congratulations and my deepest heartfelt thanks for your kindness in yielding to the prayers of the fifty thousand petitions which I had the pleasure of sending to you. And I most emphatically declare that words are too inadequate to express how related we are to know that you, by one stroke of your pen, have prevented an everlasting disgrace to the nation's womanhood by saving this woman from being hanged at the capital of the nation.

The woman is dissatisfied with the President's action, saying: "I preferred the rope or free air. If he did not want to free me, he should have let my sentence stand. Everybody ought to vote the Democratic ticket."

FARLEY TALKS WITH GAYNOR

Commissioner W. W. Farley, head of the State Excise Department, who is engaged at present in suppressing all violation of the excise law in this city, had a talk with Mayor Gaynor at the City Hall yesterday afternoon. When he went away he said that his visit had nothing to do with the investigation of the Police Department. It is understood that this talk was largely in regard to the all-night restaurants that keep open without a special license.

HEALTH NOTES.

Tuberculosis and Environment.

By Dr. Jocelyn Van Vleet Manning.

"The wounded soldiery of mankind," as Robert Louis Stevenson called those men and women who had contracted tuberculosis, should be acquainted with environmental factors which aid or retard healing of the lungs.

Cases of pulmonary tuberculosis, as a rule, do not do well at the seashore or sea level, or in winter resorts of low altitude, like Florida and South California.

The lungs may be soothed into quietude, with no further invasion of tissue, by residence in warm, moist air, but repair of pulmonary tissue does not take place.

Other conditions being equal, a slight change to higher elevation is always of remedial value to the damaged lung. The removal to the considerable elevation of sanatoriums in the Appalachian range, or the dry plateaus of the West is immediately tonic to the tuberculous.

Removal to a higher altitude directly increases the percentage of the hemoglobin-oxygen carrier-blood platelets, and white cells of the blood; these elements constitute the life giving and disease resisting qualities of the vital fluid tissue.

With every ascent of one hundred feet of elevation there is
